

The Flying Turtle

Timmy the Turtle had one big dream—he wanted to fly like the birds in the sky.

His friends laughed kindly.

“Turtles can’t fly,” said Bella the Bird.

“But I believe I can!” Timmy said with a smile.

Every day, Timmy tried something new.

He tied balloons to his shell.

He built wings out of leaves and twigs.

But nothing worked—until one windy day...

A big gust of wind whooshed through the meadow.

Timmy climbed onto a small hill, opened his leaf-wings, and jumped.

WHEEEE!

The wind lifted him high into the air!

He floated, he glided, he twirled like a feather.

His friends watched in awe.

"You're really flying!" Bella chirped.

When Timmy landed gently in the grass, he beamed.

"I told you dreams can come true—even for turtles."
